

Dr N Hammond-Browning
University of Gloucestershire
Oxstalls Campus
Longlevens
Gloucester
UK

19th July 2019

To the Editors of the Indian Journal of Medical Ethics,

Please consider my article, Indian Uterine Transplantation: Regulatory Challenges and Public Confidence, for publication in the Indian Journal of Medical Ethics.

Uterine transplantation is increasing worldwide, with 15 births reports and over 60 transplants conducted. Information from the transplants conducted in India is limited, with little public facing information. Building upon Srinivasan article that was published in your journal 2 years ago, (S Srinivasan, Uterus transplants in India: yawning regulatory gaps Indian J Med Ethics, 2017 Jul-Sep 2(3) NS:135-7) this article visits Indian uterus transplants, raising the questions around the appropriate regulatory basis for approval, in order to increase public and professional confidence.

I hope that this will be of interest to readers of your esteemed journal.

With thanks for taking the time consider my article,

Dr N Hammond-Browning
University of Gloucestershire
UK
Nhammond-browning@glos.ac.uk